STATE OF GEORGIA

§
IN RE: DOCKET/HEARINGS §
SCHEDULED FOR JANUARY 22, §
2025, §
§

ORDER REGARDING
DOCKETS OF JANUARY 22, 2025

On January 20, 2025, at 9:28 a.m., the National Weather Service in Charleston, South Carolina issued a Hazardous Weather Outlook & a Cold Weather Advisory at 9:16 a.m. (which will be jointly referred to hereinafter as “the Advisories”)¹, both of which are expected to affect Bryan County, Georgia, among other areas of this State and elsewhere. According to the Advisories, Bryan County will experience “excessive cold, ice accumulation, [and] snow/sleet” from Tuesday, January 21, 2025, through Sunday, January 26, 2025. The Advisories also warn of very cold wind chills of 10 to 20 degrees until sometime Wednesday, January 22, 2025. The Advisories provide that the impacts could include:

frostbite and hypothermia . . . if unprotected skin is exposed to these temperatures. Wind chill values can lead to hypothermia with prolonged exposure. This will be an unusually long period of bitterly cold weather. Daytime highs will only warm into the upper 30s to around 40 degrees Tuesday and mid upper 30s Wednesday. Overnight lows will drop into the mid to upper 20s tonight then lower to mid 20s Tuesday night.

(Advisories, supra). Lastly, the Advisories admonish that caution should be used when traveling. Id. According to local media, “[c]oastal communities could also see 0.25” of ice accumulation, which could be a big impact on roads and especially bridges.”²

Based on the foregoing, the Court is concerned that travel could impose a great risk for those individuals who will be traveling for their scheduled hearings before the Court on January 22, 2025. It is therefore incumbent upon the Court to continue its dockets of January 22, 2024.

NOW THEREFORE, pursuant to this Court’s discretionary control of its own dockets, and in order to give facility and expedition to its own proceedings, it is hereby ORDERED that the January 22, 2025, dockets, including all cases scheduled to come before the Court at 9:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. on the foregoing date, are hereby CONTINUED until further order of this Court.
